HELP! THE HYPHENS ARE ON THE LOOSE!

Hyphens can be used to split long words when you get to the end of a line. But watch out! Split a word in the wrong place, and you never know what might happen!

Read each two-line sentence on the page, in which the last word on the top line has been divided with a hyphen. What should the sentence say (without the hyphen), and what does it SEEM to say?

You'll need your largest dictionaries to work out these puns – have fun!

Will was amazed by the selection of clothing in the menswear section of the Department Store.

Dan Sinkween, the music and dance teacher, believed that discovery often leads to effective learning.

The furious demonstrators put on a flagrant display with their banners.

Rob Inkusins gave up figure-skating and became a security officer at the rink instead.

The old skateboarding park had rampant damage as well as being eaten by woodworm.

In Batman's opinion, the Joker's worst crime was the manslaughter on April Fool's Day.

May Denly said she would prefer a weeknight when the extremely tall Sir Loin asked her to the afternoon jousting.

If you're looking for stupidity, you'll find it nowhere in this school!

"The Meating Place" is a notable restaurant with a long-standing reputation.

KookRite Products is notorious for its unreliable breakfast appliances such as toasters and coffee makers.

Olive Althelitezon said the useless laws on energy reduction annoyed her.

You could tell by his hand-shake that Serge Unn would be no good at playing 'Operation'!
